The Capital Times (Madison, Wisconsin), Edition – Page
Printed on Mar 14,

WEATHER
Fair, continued cold tonight. Minimum near zero. Saturday increasing cloudiness, probably snow and rising temperature. Sunrise 7:15 a. m. Sunset 5:12 p. m.

THE CAPITAL TIMES

Associated Press Photos ★ ★ Acme Newspictures ★ ★ Associated Press ★ ★ NEA Service

HOME EDITION
Net Paid Circulation Yesterday..... 28,180
The largest net paid Daily Circulation of any newspaper in Wisconsin outside of Milwaukee.

MADISON, WIS., FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1940 TWENTY-TWO PAGES PRICE THREE CENTS

VOL. 45, NO. 50

Gaiety Blends with Formality as 800 Couples Enjoy University's Annual Junior Prom

University of Wisconsin junior prom leaders decreed formality as the keynote of the annual highlight of the campus social season, but last night's ball at the Memorial Union blended gaiety with formality as 800 couples danced and listened to the orchestras directed by Duke Ellington and Henry Busse. The photograph at the left above shows a few of the gay dancers in front of Busse's bandstand. The leader is seen over the heads of the dancing students. Queen Betty Jane Tracy, Madison, and King John Howell, Hartsdale, N. Y., ruled over prom. In the second picture they are shown with James Robertson, WIBA announcer, (left), as they spoke to radio listeners during a broadcast from the scene of the prom festivities. The traditional grand march which was led by the royal couple attracted scores of prom-goers who stood behind a cardinal ribbon. Part of the throng is seen in the third photograph. But even gay young people must have their relaxation—as the quartet at the right show. Note that each of the two girls has removed one of her slippers, apparently to rest feet grown weary from dancing. The flash of the photolamp surprised them; thereafter their names were not available.—Photos by Al Gilbert of WIBA staff.

More Pictures on Society Page

Armored Russ Sleds Lead Violent Attack On Finnish Defenses

Kill, Capture Russ

British Wait Blitzkrieg in Air by Nazis

Large Scale Raids by New Long-Range Bombers Seen in Spring

"The grandest bunch of young people in the country," so designated by Pres. Clarence A. Dykstra, apparently earned that characterization in four hours of gay but well-mannered participation in the university's annual junior prom at the Memorial Union last night.

Approximately 1,600 persons danced away the late hours of last night and the early ones of this morning to the music of the nationally-known orchestras led by Duke Ellington and Henry Busse, but the formally-clad students enjoyed themselves with a noticeable absence of raucous clamor.

Pres. Dykstra offered his words of praise in introducing King John Howell, Hartsdale, N. Y., and Queen Betty Jane Tracy, Madison, to the prom-goers.

An announcement that Gov. Julius P. Heil was unable to attend the affair "because of a previous engagement" was greeted with shouts of laughter.

Dean Scott H. Goodnight, whose prom speeches are traditional, recalled his recent words on the small number of Communist-minded members of the American Student union

(Continued on page 4, col. 6)

FR Tells Press He'll Oppose Slash In Ag Funds By Congress

Newspapers.com
www.newspapers.com/image/#44339837