in his talk.

"I am delighted that Prom isn't being boycotted or picketed by the Wisconsin affiliates of the American Student Union," Dean Goodnight declared.

Howell welcomed the throng. Then "On with the dance!" was the order.

In the Union's Great hall Duke Ellington led his Negro musicians in torrid Harlem swing that kept scores massed about his bandstand throughout the evening, but those who cared to dance sought the Council room or Tripp commons and the music of Henry Busse's orchestra or Eddy Nelson's campus organization.

There was an unusual number of faculty and older Madison couples in the throng; they seemed to enjoy Ellington's blaring "show tunes" and Busse's "sweeter" music alike.

Decorations were less general than in other years, with surrealistic dance panels on the stairways, glittering backdrops behind the orchestras, and vases of flowers used instead of the usual transformation of the entire building to fit a special theme.

Strict formality of garb had been decreed by prom leaders, but men wore either the black tie and tuxedo or white tie and tails with equal aplomb. Outside of the receiving line there were few white gloves in evidence among the strikingly garbed women.

In the receiving line early in the evening were King John and Queen Betty Jane; Pres. and Mrs. Dykstra; Dean of Women Louise Troxell Greeley; Dean of Men Scott H. Goodnight; Mrs. C. C. Tracy, 2117 Kendall ave., mother of the queen; Mrs. Elizabeth C. Howell, mother of the king, who came from Hartsdale, N. Y., for the festivities, and Roy Lang, friend of the prom king who escorted Mrs. Howell. Others who greeted the prom-goers were the following assistant general chairmen and their partners:

Arthur Nielson, Winnetka, Ill., with Miss Nancy Nesbit, Madison; John Duffey, Madison, with Miss Mitzi Hutter, Beaver Dam; Richard Garner, Madison, and Miss Rosalie O'Connor, Ft. Wayne, Ind.; Arthur Steele, Racine, with Miss Peggy Nelson, Los Angeles, Cal.; Peter Teige, Stoughton, with Miss Barbara Kessenich, Madison; Jerry Gumbiner, Chicago, and Miss Margie Ann Estrow, New York City; and John Day, Lancaster, with Miss Lorraine Smithback, Madison.

During the evening the Badger Beauties were presented to the dancers and the king and queen were again introduced. The Badger Beauties, who served as a court of honor for Miss Tracy, were the Misses Marion Cnare and Merrilyn Olson, Madison; Barbara Morey, Decatur, Ill.; Jane Gibson, Oshkosh; Lois Senty, Plymouth; and Kay Baker, Rocky River, O.
