School Head Scores Fear

Social, Economic Changes Seen Due

Rev. Charles C. Miltner, C. S. C., president of the University of Portland, told a student convocation and a joint meeting of the Mothers' and Dads' clubs that the war calls for adjustments in our social and economic lives.

The university president, making his first address since the declaration of war, asserted that military regulations are justified because they are for the common welfare and therefore not arbitrary.

He said the regulations not only should be obeyed but should be accepted with confidence because the military has a better knowledge of what is taking place.

Father Miltner pointed to the need also of psychological adjustment, and declared there are two kinds of fear, one a foe, the other an ally.

Fear, which can be classed as a foe, is that which is not controlled by reason and is grounded on rumors and unconfirmed reports. This, he said, tends to dismay, discourage, divide and weaken us, and can only be averted by regarding rumors and unconfirmed reports with skepticism.

Brent Heads Drama Cast

Ellington On Mayfair Stage

"International Lady," a drama of wartime intrigue starring George Brent, Ilona Massey and Basil Rathbone, is the screen feature at the Mayfair theater where Duke Ellington and his band head the bill with their stage entertainment.

Ellington and his men provide a top slice of melody with the famed conductor offering a number of his hit numbers. Singers Ivie Anderson and Herb Jefferies are highlighted on the program with members of the band featured.

"International Lady" is a drama of wartime intrigue in which a golden-voiced concert singer upsets first the plans of England and America and then does as much for the schemes of a wily sabotage ring. Miss Massey, in this role, acquires herself brilliantly on two scores—as a singer and as a dramatic actress.

Jimmie Fidler In Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 11—Hollywood, like the entire nation, was stunned but not the least dismayed by the declaration of war against Japan, after that country's atrocious attacks on Hawaii and the Philippines.

For a few hours on Monday morning, word came to a standstill in the studios, where hundreds of radios resounded with the speeches of President Roosevelt and other government officials.

Then questions began to fly. "Would Jimmy Stewart remain in service now?" How soon will Robert Montgomery, Douglas Fairbanks, ex-producer Gene Markey and other motion picture people now in uniform see Pacific war action?"

Many Questions Asked "How many young actors, given delayed draft ratings because their services were not in actual demand, would now be rushed into uniform?" "Will Wayne Morris, big, affable kid of so many Warner pictures, and one of the first into uniform, be fighting soon?"

It is with great respect to the British actors that I say, I did not hear one of them cry "I told you so." On the contrary, they seem grimly happy that opportunity has now come for them to do for America, as America has been doing for them.

Within the studios, stars, directors and other employes quickly adjusted their minds and hearts to the new trend of events. By Monday noon, every loim was geared; the motion picture industry and its entire personnel was ready, as always, to lend fullest support to our government.

Yes, it's "War on Japan" in Hollywood, as it is in every other city and hamlet, and little private problems have given way now to the single, immeasurably larger problem that confronts every American today.
