Milk Official Asked About Mafia Ties

HARRISBURG (AP)—The executive secretary of the state Milk Marketing Board has been questioned by a special House committee about his association with a dairy owner named as a Mafia member in a Pennsylvania Crime Commission report.

Harry E. Kapleau told the special House Committee on Law Enforcement Wednesday that his only current relationship with the dairy owner—Peter Maggio of Philadelphia—stems from his duties as an official of the milk board.

Maggio also testified and, under questioning by his attorney, I. Raymond Kremer, denied any involvement with organized crime.

Committee counsel Downey Rice and Chairman H. Joseph Hepford, R-Dauphin, focused their questions on.

—Whether Kapleau had business dealings with Maggio before being appointed to the milk board by Gov. Shapp 2½ years ago.

—Whether Kapleau had a long conversation with Maggio and Maggio's accountant at a federal milk price hearing earlier this year.

Kapleau said his only personal business dealings with Maggio were 20 years ago, when, as a milk broker, he supplied Maggio's dairy with a small amount of milk.

Another former Kapleau firm, which did accounting for milk dealers, handled the Maggio account, but Kapleau said the work was done by his former partner, Maurice J. Kluger. Kluger is now Maggio's accountant, Kapleau said.

"You're going back a number of years—this goes back 15 or 20 years ago," Kapleau said. "This all sounds so ominous and ridiculous to me."

At the federal price hearing, held at Downingtown, Kapleau said he recalled talking briefly with Maggio and Kluger about the milk industry. Maggio testified that the three men talked for possibly 45 minutes.

Urges Women Not To Fear Job Failure

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Women in management must not be afraid to risk failure in pursuit of higher paying jobs, the president of a national women's organization told a one-day women in management conference here.

Margot Sherman of New York told the conference attended by about 250 women Wednesday that too many well educated women have limited their chances of stepping up to better jobs because they fear failure. She is national president of Women in Communications, whose Georgia chapter sponsored the conference.

Ellington Sideman Found Dead

LONDON (AP) — Duke Ellington's tenor saxophonist, Paul Gonsalves, was found dead in bed Wednesday at a house in North London, police reported. He was 53.

The police said the cause of death had not been determined but there was no suspicion of foul play. An inquest will be held.

Gonsalves, whose home was in New York City, played with Count Basie before joining Ellington in 1950.

Says 100,000 "Double Dippers" On US Payroll

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., has urged that retirement pay be withheld from military retirees holding other federal jobs.

He told the Senate Defense Appropriations subcommittee Wednesday there are more than 100,000 "double dippers" on the federal payroll drawing a salary as well as military retirement pension.

Abourezk said the dual compensation system encourages military men to retire after 20 years of service, with the Defense Department losing experts in many fields to other federal agencies.

New York Specialist

Claims Treatments Result In Defects, "Second Cancers"

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — A New York cancer specialist said today there's initial evidence that the powerful, combined treatments being used with growing success against childhood cancer can cause "second cancers" and other defects in some patients years later.

Dr. Giulio J. D'Angio stressed that only a relatively few cases of late-developing complications — including impairment of normal function of some bodily organs — have been noted among hundreds of patients benefitting from "notable advances" against childhood cancer in the last decade.

But he told the first national conference on childhood cancer, sponsored by the American Cancer Society, that there is a need for special caution in applying the "radical treatments" successful against the original malignancy.

The treatments include surgery, super-voltage irradiation and various combinations of "chemotherapeutic" drugs — sometimes all three in combination.

He said in a report prepared for the opening session of the conference that cancer specialists are now trying to identify and retain only those components that are essential for success against the initial cancer and eliminate those that may pose a risk years later.

Childhood cancer — including leukemia, Hodgkins' disease and certain tumors of the brain, nervous system, eye, kidney and bone — is relatively rare, striking only one child in 7,000. But it ranks second only to accidents as a killer of school-age children and is the No. 1 disease killer for children under 15.

In his report, Dr. D'Angio, chief of radiation therapy at New York's Memorial Hospital for Cancer and Allied Diseases, said some immediate bad effects have long been noted from the new treatments for children with cancer.

"Added to these recognized immediate complications are less well-known, more insidious, but equally severe late effects of treatment which may take decades to become manifest," he said.

"Such sequelae as oncogenesis (production of a second cancer) and impairment of normal organ function are becoming matters of increasing concern now that more children are surviving longer...."

He said the ultimate goal of present precautionary efforts is "to insure that the increasing number of successfully treated children of today do not become the chronically ill adults of tomorrow."

Paper Report Explains Omitted Tape

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Globe reported today that the edited version of one of the White House tapes omits a considerable portion of a conversation in which President Nixon launches a personal vendetta against lawyer Edward Bennett Williams.

Members of the House Judiciary Committee listened in a closed door session Wednesday to the tape in question, a Sept. 15, 1972, conversation between Nixon, former counsel John W. Dean III and former White House aide H.R. Haldeman.

The committee got the recording from the special Watergate prosecutor for its impeachment investigation. The Globe said it obtained a copy of the unedited version of the conversation from a committee source. The edited version was made public recently when Nixon released the contents of 42 White House conversations.

The Globe said the version it obtained Wednesday contained far more information about the Williams matter than does the public version.

Judiciary members reportedly heard Nixon say of Williams, "I think we are going to fix the son of a bitch," and "I wouldn't want to be in Edward Bennett Williams' position after the election."

The Globe quoted Haldeman as saying in reference to Williams, "That is a guy we've got to ruin."

Williams had been hired by the Democratic National Committee to represent it in a civil suit against the Committee to Re-Elect the President in connection with the Watergate break-in. He also represented The Washington Post, which traced the break-in to Nixon's campaign committee.

According to the Globe's unedited version, the following dialogue concerning Williams took place between Nixon and Dean:

Nixon: "I think we are going to fix the son-of-a-bitch. Believe me. We are going to. We've got to, because he's a bad man."

Dean: "Absolutely."

Nixon: "I want the most comprehensive notes on all those who tried to do us in."

The edited version released by the White House refers only briefly to Williams. When his name came up in the conversation, Haldeman says, "The bureau (Federal Bureau of Investigation) ought to go into Edward Bennett Williams and start questioning him and have him tied up for a couple of days."

Nixon replies: "Yeah. I hope they do."

Consumer Counsel Appointed

HARRISBURG (AP)—Gov. Shapp has appointed an attorney to serve as consumer counsel in regulatory matters and to develop changes in regulatory and rate-setting procedures.

Attorney Philip R. Kalodner, the governor's special consumer advisor, was named to the post Wednesday and will serve as a special assistant attorney general.

His first assignment is to represent consumers in the Philadelphia Electric Co. rate case, which went into hearings Wednesday.

He will also develop a legislative package to amend the present public utility code, the governor said.

In addition, Kalodner, 43, of Wynncote, Montgomery County, will provide consumer consulting services on regulatory matters arising from the energy crisis.

Kalodner will be paid on an hourly basis under the terms of a service purchase contract. His wages are not to exceed $17,500 through Dec. 31, 1974, Shapp said.
