Health Education Updating Needed, Teachers Informed

Health teachers representing the seven Armstrong School District secondary schools gathered at Lenape Elementary School to discuss current trends in health education.

Dr. Guy Parcell, from Pennsylvania State University, spoke to the group on the importance of updating health education.

Health teachers, he said, should place a special emphasis on "value development" among their students.

Many health textbooks, Dr. Parcell said, teach concepts and health rules, in short, providing the student with a great deal of factual material. In recent years, health classes have begun to deal with the effects of alcohol and drugs as well as the traditional study of the human body and nutrition.

All these lessons, says Dr. Parcell, are designed to help students make decisions based on fact. To insure that students make the correct decisions, Dr. Parcell recommended that health teachers include the "affective domain" in their teaching. He said that attitudes, opinions and feelings must be taken into account if the knowledge of good health habits is to be transferred into sound habits and decision making.

The meeting was arranged through the cooperation of the Armstrong County Medical Society Auxiliary, the ARIN Intermediate Unit and the Armstrong School District.

Pat Nixon | Alexander Solzhenitsyn | Donald Segretti

About People . . .

By United Press International

DESCRIBES TACTICS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Alexander Solzhenitsyn, the novelist expelled from the Soviet Union, Sunday told how the Soviet secret police (KGB) threaten dissidents.

In an article written for Time magazine, Solzhenitsyn said in 1966 the KGB used letters forged with his handwriting to correspond with Vassili Grekhov, the director of the Russian National Association, an emigre organization based in Brussels that deals with czarist military history.

"At first, the letters contained only innocent requests for information about the first World War," Solzhenitsyn said. "Then followed a suggestion, purported from me, that Grekhov come to Prague or send a representative.

"Apparently the aim was to arrest some Russian emigres from the West who were visiting Prague and to concoct around them a criminal case that would have demonstrated that I had links with emigre organizations."

SEGRETTI TO WRITE

FREDERICK, Md. (UPI) — Convicted political trickster Donald Segretti has hired a New York literary agent to handle publication of his "dirty tricks" accounts, a radio station said Sunday.

WFMD said the Scott Meredith Literary Agency has tentatively agreed to handle publishing arrangements. Sid Meredith of the agency was quoted as saying that no contract has been signed and the agency has not received any part of the manuscript.

Segretti served a six-month prison term for conviction on three misdemeanor charges stemming from the 1972 presidential primary in Florida.

"PRIVATE LOVE LETTERS"

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pat Nixon considered the White House tapes related to Watergate like "private love letters" and did not believe President Nixon should release them, People magazine said Sunday.

People said Mrs. Nixon told Helene Drown, a longtime friend, the tapes could be compared with "private love letters" meant for "one person alone."

Mrs. Nixon also indicated she shared Nixon's distrust of news media by telling Mrs. Drown "It's right out of 'The Merchant of Venice.' They're after the last pound of flesh," People said.

SEES POSSIBILITY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., believes President Nixon would change his mind about resigning rather than put the nation through the "televised horror" of impeachment, Newsweek magazine reported Sunday.

"As of this moment, he is not about to resign," Goldwater said. "But if he begins to see that there is no way out, I think that rather than put the country through two or three months of televised horror, he should seriously consider stepping down."

Goldwater was asked if he would be part of a GOP delegation asking Nixon to resign. "I know of no reason now, in the middle of May, for me or anyone else to go and ask him," he said. "If I became convinced that this should be done, I would have no qualms about doing it. But I don't think the time is here yet."

Notable Deaths From Everywhere

ATLANTA (UPI) — Funeral services will be held at All Souls Episcopal Church Wednesday for Dan R. Topping Sr., multimillionaire sportsman who headed the New York Yankees through the golden era of the Bronx Bombers.

NORWALK, Conn. (UPI) — Merrill Nunamaker, 19, died this weekend after refusing needed blood transfusions because of his religious beliefs.

Police said Nunamaker was injured seriously in an automobile accident Friday night when he was thrown through the windshield.

Nunamaker told Norwalk Hospital officials that his beliefs as a Jehovah's Witness prohibited him from taking a whole blood transfusion.

State police asked Fairfield County State's Attorney Donald A. Brown to seek a court order to override the youth's refusal.

Brown said he called three Superior Court judges to determine if a court order could be obtained to force Nunamaker to accept the transfusions when the danger of death was imminent. But Brown said it was impossible.
