"LET APPROPRIATE SALUTES BE FIRED in honor of Duke Ellington and John Latouche. They have composed a flaming musical play in modern style. Mr. Ellington, the hot drum-major, and Mr. Latouche the metronomic word man, have constructed a musical play from the ground up with an eloquent score, brisk ballets and a cast of dancers and singers who are up to snuff. Nicholas Ray as the director, Oliver Smith as the talented scene-designer and Walter Florelli as the costume-designer have translated 'Beggars Holiday' into a garish and bitter dance of extraordinary quality. Mr. Ellington and Mr. Latouche have given Broadway a score and lyrics we can be proud of."
—BROOKS ATKINSON, TIMES

"A BRILLIANT MUSICAL..."
Mr. Ellington's score is a generous outpouring of his individual talent, filled with the spirit and warmth of his music, the pulsing beat of his rhythms, the strength and the refreshing colors of his modern harmonies. Alfred Drake is one of the best equipped singers on Broadway. His vivid personality, his manly, agreeable baritone, his convincing acting are not common to all male vocalists. The rowdy antics of Zero Mostel always get the proper audience response...
... all in all, a remarkable fusion of talents."
—ROBERT BAGAR, WORLD-TELEGRAM

"QUITE AN ENTERTAINMENT"
... Duke Ellington has decorated it with a huge bunch of songs and John Latouche has explored the humorous possibilities of sex strenuously in his libretto and lyrics. Avon Long bounds onto the Broadway stage at intervals with Marie Bryant to give the doings zest and musical excitement. Drake sings with power and style and the chorus devises some pretty patterns of jive and ballet."
—HOWARD BARNES, HERALD TRIBUNE

"THIS IS SOMETHING"
Something bold, and beautifully unlike the run-of-Broadway play with songs and dances."
—ROBERT GARLAND, JOURNAL-AMERICAN
